Challenge and heroism

FACING THE CHALLENGE

The work is an activity requiring discipline, dedication, requires both appreciation and support, and requires responsibility and quite often self-sacrifice, work is honor!

With your work you become independent, you gain confidence, self-confidence, you develop communication with people and with your work you always help someone...

One of the professions with the responsibility to help people, providing security, is the work of the police.

A police officer is professionally trained to face challenges, whatever they may be.

Dealing with unfamiliar situations is already an integral part of his professional journey.

He is called for protection, for confrontation, he shows credibility, he is always ready to respond, to take risks, to monitor with the task given to him.

The police officer is not completely free from duty even when he is asleep, he is always on call to intervene. He is a police officer 24 hours a day.

The unique police uniform, wherever it is seen, shows security for people.

Police officers often encounter situations that put their lives at risk, yet they continue to work because they have to respond to calls, be accountable, show security, and establish order.

The officer works according to institutional laws and rules and implements them precisely in daily affairs. The law is a guide to work.

The duties of a police officer are varied, but they are all regulated to protect the life, dignity and property of the citizen.

The police often face a thief who can shoot, violent protesters, a sick person who attacks him, one who insults, someone who disobeys, another who jokes, someone who mocks him

The officer "does not get wet by the rain" nor "covered by snow", he performs his duties in the places where he is assigned, because he has sworn to do so and someone who even praises and congratulates him, but he continues to do his job, to maintain order and calmly and patiently, showing professionalism, to get through all these situations. The officer "does not get wet by the rain" nor "covered by snow", he performs his duties in the places where he is assigned, because he has sworn to do so.

He also has a family, to which he cannot respond as he owes, because police duties are what make him be loaded.

Depending on the circumstances and events the schedules are often prolonged and workload becomes more evident.

The uniform bears responsibility, but also carries education, morals, credibility and pride.

Therefore, in order to be good, we must appreciate the one who is authorized for the work he does, to act reasonably.

Respect and gratitude are the basis of the will for the challenging jobs that a police officer faces every day.

Responsibility and rationality make us be more careful!

The police nurse who with her work and positivity faces any difficulty

She shows that during these 16 years of work in the Police, the year 2020 and the beginning of 2021 have been among the most challenging years at work. During this period of the pandemic, the entire staff of the Directorate of Health Services faced and maximally committed towards the preservation of public health and in particular the preservation and care for the health of KP members. The outbreak of the pandemic, as it is known, has been unknown before, but even dealing with it has been stressful and challenging Antigona Imeri Zejnullahi was born in Drenas. She finished her primary school there, while the medical secondary school at "Dr Ali Sokoli" in Prishtina, the branch of General Medicine.

She studied Psychology, while she finished her MASTER studies in Clinical Psychology. In addition to schooling, she continued with various trainings in the field of medicine and psychology, studies that have complemented her professionally.

From 1999 she started working at the Health Center in Drenas, in 2002 she moved to the UCK, specifically in the Intern Clinic, and from 2005 she started working for the Directorate of Health Services at the Kosovo Police. Her willingness for work, her commitment and dedication for professional work in the Police made her be rewarded with many praises and recognitions, as a sign of gratitude.

During this period of work for the Police (about 16 years), Antigona also had challenges, but she felt good when she managed with her work to ease the pain of her colleagues from various diseases or injuries.

She has always been engaged with the medical team during various operations conducted by the Police, including cases of important escorts, where she has been part of them.

In addition to the tasks we mentioned, in the usual daily life, the nurse Antigona completes medical documentation for police officers, deals with requests addressed to the Directorate of Health Services for cases of various natures, visits police officers who are injured on duty or even ill with other diseases, at hospitals and private homes.

Antigona is also engaged in providing medical assistance and medical advice to KP staff who need these services.

She shows that during these 16 years of work in the Police, the year 2020 and the beginning of 2021 have been among the most challenging years at work. During this period of the pandemic, the entire staff of the Directorate of Health Services faced and maximally committed towards the preservation of public health and in particular the preservation and care for the health of KP members. The outbreak of the pandemic, as it is known, has been unknown before, but even dealing with it has been stressful and challenging.

With the appearance of the first cases of COVID-19, Antigona together with the other staff of the Directorate of Health Services (DHS), are engaged in conducting awareness lectures, first for the Border Police and then for other units of the KP, and have also prepared information posters, in order for the staff to have information on how to protect themselves from the virus.

Another challenge has been the supply with the protective equipment and their administering. During this period of more than a year, work has been performed in extra hours and Antigona worked diligently, sparing no effort in providing medical services to those affected by the virus who were not few among the members of the KP. Although the working hours have been long and tiring, she felt good when she saw that with her work she has managed to help those affected by COVID-19.

Difficult moments in dealing with the pandemic have been when colleagues from the KP have lost the battle with the virus. She remembers with pain the conversations with them, she remembers the moments during the treatment, and she also remembers the hopeful words she spoke to them.

The nurse Antigona during her continuous engagements, despite taking protective measures, in November 2020, after noticing some unusual symptoms, after being tested, she resulted positive for the COVID-19 virus. She says the virus has not been easy. Among the problems she experienced there were severe fatigue, experiencing anxiety, insomnia, these are the symptoms that generally characterize this virus. She was treated at home and received the therapies in consultation with the staff of the DHS, whom she thanked for providing support and medical assistance during this period.

Antigona, being a health professional, but also considering the fact that she has passed the COVID-19 virus, has a message for everyone, she appeals to respect all the measures recommended by the NIPHK and other health professionals regarding prevention of the spread of the pandemic.

Recently, as part of the vaccination of the medical staff, Antigona was also vaccinated with the anti-COVID-19 vaccine and on this occasion calls you to be vaccinated in the first case that is given the opportunity. It shows that the vaccine has been the same in terms of effects as any other vaccine.

Antigona is married and has three children and lives with her family in Prishtina.

The combination of family and professional life commitments fulfills Antigona spiritually, gives her motivation, making her always positive in appearance.

Professionalism, combined with humanity, makes people powerful.

Road Traffic Safety

THE ROLE AND ENGAGEMENT OF

The role of Road Traffic Division (RTD) of Kosovo Police is to implement the road traffic legislation and to draft strategic plans which impact in preventing road traffic accidents. The Road Traffic Division analyses, evaluates, plans and drafts the strategies for the integrated and sustainable development of road traffic safety in the country.

Road traffic safety

Road traffic safety continues to be a challenge not only for Kosovo, but also for many countries in Europe and the world. To address this challenge, the Kosovo Police is constantly making great efforts to increase road traffic safety, using a safety-providing approach through the prevention and detection of all activities that may affect the overall road traffic safety, cooperation and coordination of police actions, with special emphasis on police units, then inter-institutional, international, media, civil society and various experts in the field of road traffic safety, which includes the strategic orientation of addressing road traffic challenges.

Within the comprehensive system of providing road traffic safety and within the decentralized management system of road traffic units in the Kosovo Police, the RTD is responsible for the strategic orientation in addressing road traffic safety. While, at the operational level, the RTD is responsible for the management of the Highway Control Unit, the Unit for Escorting Hazardous Materials and the Unit for Escorting Important Personalities.

The (RTD) division is responsible for the strategic development of Regional Road Traffic Units (RRTU), where part of the duties and responsibilities of RRTU is to provide road traffic safety and raise the awareness level of road traffic participants, while the management of the units in question is done by the relevant structure of the Regional Police Directorate. The RRTU with their activities cover 665.17 km of highways and 1473.52 km of regional roads.

Within its activities, the Road Traffic Division supports various European and international activities related to road safety, where the RTD has joined the European Roads Networking (European Roads Policing Network), in the implementation of the operation. roadpol "1 - seat belt, from 08-15.03.2021, drafting and implementing the operational plan roadpol - seat belt, where Kosovo Police imposed a total of 4579 tickets related to this operation.

The Road Traffic Division has also carried out awareness campaigns, such as: "Speed kills", "Increased caution when driving on icy roads", "Do not hurry, family is waiting for you!", "Your carelessness causes suffering for others", "Put on your seat belt", which were followed by press releases through KP social networks.

Considering that our country like the whole globe is facing with pandemic as a result of the Covid-19, Kosovo Police, respectively the RTD, is continuously engaged in implementing the operational order OO "Preparedness and response to virus Covid-19", in order to prevent this virus.

While, regarding the regional cooperation, it is important to emphasize that from 2010 and onwards, on each summer season, a Memorandum of Cooperation has been signed for the organization of police road services of the Albanian State Police and Kosovo Police in the territory of the Republic of Albania, in an effort to increase the road traffic level safety, prevention of accidents and traffic offenses, saving people's lives in road accidents, as well as rigorous implementation of laws and rules in the field of road traffic. Exceptionally, this memorandum was not implemented in 2020 due to the situation with the pandemic "COVID-19".

Whereas, regarding the statistical comparative analysis with Western Balkans countries, the Secretariat of the Road Transport Community Treaty and the European Commission, on 20.04.2021, have published statistics on deaths in road traffic accidents for 2020 and the comparison 2010-2020 per 1 million inhabitants, for all member states. This publication also includes the countries of the Western Balkans, such as: Albania, Northern Macedonia, Kosovo, Montenegro and Serbia. Based on the tables presented below, it is noted that Kosovo compared to the Western Balkan countries for 2020 and the comparison of accidents 2010-2020, has less deaths per 1 million inhabitants.

The Road Traffic Division remains committed and engaged in performing duties and activities aiming at raising security to all participants in road traffic.

THE CORONAVIRUS A

During the coronavirus pandemic we need to focus on mental health as much as we do on physical health. Currently the world is in a state of stress. The coronavirus pandemic urged people to buy out of panic, be it food, pharmaceuticals, hygiene and cleaning. Research on social networks, portals or even other forms in search of the latest information on how to protect ourselves against infection and the worry about who we can meet and how we can avoid them.

This is too much to deal with in a short time and the influx of outside influences is huge

People who have not previously had problems with psychological health, suddenly have problems sleeping, problems with regular nutrition, concentration and at the same time in normal daily life. Those who have previously suffered from anxiety or disorder of fixed ideas and repetitive behaviors, the negative impact of information for the possibility of infection with the coronavirus and other information in relation to the virus have worsened the symptoms they have had.

Maintaining emotional and psychological health

Now, more than ever, we need to maintain mental health and make it as functional as possible in relation to the situation we are dealing with.

Another problem is the speed at which news about the coronavirus spreads and how quickly that information changes. But even worse is the amount of "fake news" circulating. It is human to feel the need to be informed, no one wants to risk being infected with this disease. Insecurity and feelings the lack of control are the background of anxiety. Something is expected to happen and it awakens anxiety.

An additional problem is the new protocols about hand washing and not touching the face, among other things, can worsen the condition of some people with the disorder of fixation of repetitive behaviors.

People with obsessive-compulsive disorder and repetitive behavior clean things up constantly, such as kitchen and bathroom door handles over and over again. This may not sound too bad, but when it continues for a long time then it causes problems in daily functioning, leaving aside the obligations and daily duties in the family, work and elsewhere.

What are the steps to reduce the likelihood for the COVID-19 to adversely affect our mental health?

Avoid reading the news

We all want to be informed, but we need a break, especially from what is happening now.

Limit the time you spend on social media watching the news. This will give you space for other things. You have to be strict in reducing the time for COVID-19 related news, it will not be easy.

Practice physical exercises at home

Exercise is known to be good for mental health, and so it is now. Even if you are confined to your home, you can still walk in the garden, yard, climb stairs or even do “chair aerobics”, exercises for people with less mobility, which can be done while sitting in chairs, with favorite music.

Get out into the fresh air

Restricting movement in open spaces, such as parks and public places, does not mean that the other environment cannot be used, e.g. if you live in a house with a yard, use the yard for fresh air, if you live in a collective apartment, go out on the balcony to get fresh air. Fresh air helps reduce symptoms and cure anxiety and mood disorders. Try not to use the phone.

Reduce the time of worries

If you find yourself repeating your actions for the fear of being infected with the corona virus, limit the amount of time you wash your hands and clean the surfaces. Limit “worry time” for a certain hour each day, then try not to think during the rest of the day.

Feel and think positively

E fundit, por jo më e pavlera, besoni në Zot, lutuni për jetë, falënderojuni për secilën ditë të jetuar, jini krenar për kontributin tuaj, mos harroni se kemi përgjegjësi edhe për njerëzit që na rrethojnë, siç janë bashkëshorti/ja, prindërit, fëmijët, motrat e vëllezërit, kolegët e shumë njerëz me të cilët jemi të rrethuar.

Above all, do not stop feeling that you will not be affected by the virus and that most people who are infected with coronavirus have mild symptoms and fully recover.

Always try to see things positively, this has a good effect on maintaining mental health, reducing the impact of stress, anxiety, panic, repetitive behaviors and fixed ideas in the fight against the virus. Whenever you have the opportunity to talk to the person you consider close and trustworthy, try your best to talk about life, the benefits of life, the contribution you can make to each challenge we may encounter in our daily journey.

Follow the recommendations given by the relevant health care bodies and health professionals about taking measures to prevent coronavirus infection.

Last but not least, trust in God, pray for life, be grateful for

Above all, do not stop feeling that you will not be affected by the virus and that most people who are infected with coronavirus have mild symptoms and fully recover. Always try to see things positively, this has a good effect on maintaining mental health, reducing the impact of stress, anxiety, panic, repetitive behaviors and fixed ideas in the fight against the virus. Whenever you have the opportunity to talk to the person you consider close and trustworthy every day you live, be proud of your contribution, remember that we also have responsibilities for the people around us, such as spouse, parents, children, sisters and brothers, colleagues and many people with around us.

THE TRICHOTOMOUS STRUCTURE OF FORENSICS THE PROFILING OF THE PERPETRATOR

Written by:

Mergim BEKTESHI

(Police officer)

Throughout historical developments, forensics detailed advanced processes with its development methods and forms, making it easier for police investigators to conduct investigative actions, prosecution process of prosecutors, and an easier job for judges to consider material evidences. Forensic experts pointed out that the criminal lawyer (Korajlić and Muharremi, 2009) should have sufficient knowledge of forensic science in order to easier face it, given the advanced crime rate which has a trajectory that shows an obstacle in the initial step for all those who fight against this phenomenon, especially the Police and the Prosecution Office.

The trichotomous structure of forensics includes forensic tactics, forensic techniques and forensic methodologies, which form the basis for a more detailed overview of the scene or crime scene, as it is called in the west. The lack of this trichotomy doubles the preference to provide material evidence or as Saferstein says the lines of stories describing the crime solving skills of scientists (Saferstein, 2007), more specifically when there is a lack of coherence in these lines, the performance for law and solving the criminological mosaic fades. Forensic methods are an advancement towards the fight and prevention of crime, which makes society more insecure in facing the norms and the legal order.

Professor Vesel Latifi emphasized: "The investigator is the voice of the victim" (Latifi and Demolli, 2019), this reference includes the professional preparation and hope of the victim to rely not only on other justice institutions such as the Prosecution and the Court but also Police. The police in their journey, as well as other institutions of criminal-legal character, should focus on operational methods that cover most of the work in the fight against crime and organized crime. When we talk about organized crime not only as a notion, it constitutes a homogeneous structure and obstacle to the legal order, built to challenge the rule of law. Without the forensic trichotomy it is impossible to fight and prevent organized crime.

Tactics, techniques and methodologies together constitute the pivot of forensic work, the first studies the forms and manifestations of criminal offenses, the manner of committing the offense and the intentions of the perpetrator which is then stigmatized with criminal phenomenology and psychology. The technique includes high professional skills, among them communication, gathering and specifying information but also a wider range of utilization of scientific tools, which in the century we are living have a high progress. Crime is a very complex and dynamic negative phenomenon that adapts to social change (Korajlić and Muharremi, 2009) in addition to this, the methodology defines a combination of criminal technique and tactics, a challenge, seeing the different methods of committing crimes by the perpetrator.

The mission of the contemporary police but also the mission of the Kosovo Police "is to prevent crime, detect and investigate perpetrators of criminal offenses, by collecting and presenting facts, evidence and proof that prove the guilt or innocence of persons suspected for criminal offenses, as well as bringing the perpetrators to justice "(KP). This description of its tasks and mission presents the trichotomous structure that is achieved through operational work based on this department, to prevent criminal activity through preventive and repressive activity.

The scope and application of forensic methods represents an equivalence that requires high professional treatment by investigators, as well as prosecutors who have detailed knowledge in forensics as a science. When it comes to trichotomy it is important to look at both material and non-material evidence. The Kosovo Agency for Forensics, as an institution independent from the Police, acts professionally (AKF,

STRUCTURE OF FORENSICS AND POLICE IN THIS SEGMENT

The trichotomous structure of forensics includes forensic tactics, forensic techniques and forensic methodologies, which form the basis for a more detailed overview of the scene or crime scene, as it is called in the west.

2021) by conducting material evidence examinations in some of its sectors, has a special contribution to the trichotomy. Experts of the criminal procedure have applauded criminology as a science. According to them: It is often not known whether it is a case of fake suicide, (conspiracy), of a real murder or suicide, whether it is a forged document or the original document (Sahiti and Murati, 2016), all these dilemmas are clarified by the forensics in the courtroom that are persistently requested by the parties to the proceedings.

The courts have already increased the criteria for the presentation of evidences by the parties in the proceedings and only those evidences which are manifested in the professional course manage to incriminate and acquit the parties in the proceedings or postulat i romak da mihi factum, dabo tib ius

(give me facts to give you the right), far from the time of the Middle Ages where guilt was manifested by a single evidence. In this process, the law enforcement bodies, the Police, have an important role, where the burden of responsibility on the ground falls on the investigator, to provide evidence based on the criminal procedure (KPPRK), more precisely from article 69 of this code. A number of issues are related to forensic trichotomy, from obtaining information about committing a criminal offense or preparing a criminal offense. For both the first and the second, in addition to the instinct or deep sense of smell, the acquaintance with forensic science is needed, only in this way a comprehensive transparency is created for the argumentation of material evidence with criminal-legal effect.

Why do the pilot and the copilot never eat the same food?

The passengers' safety at the plane is almost entirely on the hands of the personnel, so the pilot in commercial flights must necessarily respect several things.

However, several rules must not be violated, one of them is that the pilot and copilot (the other or the second pilot) must not eat the same food.

Even though, according to the rule, it may sound strange, but there are very good reasons, and of course it has to do with the safety.

For example, if something goes wrong with the food of the one pilot and he is infected by the food, the other pilot shall not have the same fate and would be able to fly the plane.

It is important to mention that this practice has not been determined by law, but it was foreseen to the rules determined by the aviation companies, in order to protect the passengers in the best way, reports the telegraph.

Also, the pilots are advised to avoid certain food before the flight, as raw fishes. The food infection in flights is rare, but there are some cases.

The most known case is the one of 1982, where with expired pudding there were infected ten crew members including the pilot and copilot.

However, pilots managed to return the plane to Boston.
